THE VISIT OF THE FAIRY GODMOTHER A "GOODNIGHT" HALLOWE'EN GAME

Every party, even a Halloween fete, must have an ending, but the last game played must, by all means, be the best of all—the one to be remembered longest.

Why not allow the faeries to wind up the sport? Let the fairy godmother dispose of gifts to boys and girls in this way:

The fairy godmother, in Mother Goose costume, carrying a large basket under her cloak or shawl, enters the room and announces that she has a certain number of gifts which she proposes to distribute.

After cautioning all that the contents must be kept secret, she passes to each person a folded paper. On one is written "wealth"—on another, "honor"—on the third "fame", etc., and some of the papers are left blank.

Those whose papers contain the names of gifts are then blind-folded. The first is led up and made to kneel before the fairy godmother, to whom she repeats these words:

"Most gracious fairy, the gift you give I shall treasure and keep it as long as I live."

Then the paper containing the name of the gift is handed the fairy, who reads it aloud very solemnly: "Wealth"—and turning to her basket she draws from it a new dust-pail, to which is attached a ribbon-loop at the same time reciting these lines:

"Your choice is bad when you intrust
Your happiness where moth and rust,
In time, turn all your wealth to dust."

From a paper bag the fairy pours a small amount of dust over the kneeling girl and hangs the dust-pail round her neck.

The next person is brought forward and the performance is repeated, only altering the fairy's speech. For "Honor" shall say:

"Your honor crowds shall loud declare,
But in your heart, no crowd is there,
You'll find, like Falstaff, honor's air."

The present here is a thin horn for which the fairy blows a blast on the bowed head before her as she utters the word air. Hang the tin horn around neck.

For "Fame" the fairy gives a wreath of roses, and says as she does it:

"When Fame doth weave a laurel-wreath,
He weaves this subtle charm beneath,
For every wicked thought that's born,
The laurel grows a prickly thorn.
But where pure thought and love repose,
The laurel wreath's a wreath of roses."

Other "gifts" may be made, and with each appropriate bits of verse written and memorized by the fairy.

gess club held its second meeting Wednesday afternoon in the club rooms. Miss Rose Bennett and Miss Edyth Brown had charge of the program. Miss Bennett gave an interesting account of the historical character of the drama "Le Cid" by Corneille, while Miss Brown read the closing acts of the drama.

The retiring officers of the Pythian tea entertained members and a few guests Wednesday afternoon at a thimble in the K. of P. rooms. Luncheon was served in two courses by the hostesses. The next meeting will be in two weeks at the home of Mrs. Jellison, 228 E. Broadway. After their next meeting the Pythian sisters will entertain their husbands at a Halloween party.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Cold, clear weather prevailed over the middle west Wednesday following Tuesday's general snowstorm. Reports of storm damage from all parts of the country were numerous and it was predicted that intense suffering would be reported from many cities in the middle west because of the cold. One case of death by freezing was reported Wednesday from Milwaukee where William Weiss was found dead on his front porch.

DR. THOMSON'S
EYE TALK
(TALK NO. 190.)
Use and Disuse.

If we give regular exercise to any nerve or muscle of the body it will develop and become stronger. If we overwork it, it will break down. If it has nothing to do, it becomes weakened. This applies to the eyes as well as to other members. To preserve the eyes they should be used judiciously. If on is better than the other, the poorer eye becomes weakened by disuse. The better eye probably works too hard. If there is a defect of this kind it causes strain. Glasses that are just right will keep the eye in good condition all of your life. If they are too strong the eyes have not enough to do. If too weak they have too work too hard. Be sure in buying glasses, that you get the "just right" kind. That is the only kind I sell.
